This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. A YEAR ago I had no intention of publishing such a book as this. It may indeed serve as a sample of two long cherished projects, guides to the choice of classical and of theological books: but the special sting, which drove me from less irksome labours, was the discovery, in the spring of this year, that many even of our best Cambridge students no longer concern themselves with the general history of Greek and Roman literature. In some respects recent changes have worked well; philosophy, history, comparative philology, are more intelligently studied: but the free and open range of reading, where the learner follows mainly his native bent and powers, has lost its charms. In the first instance, as in duty bound, I address myself to our own tirones, but I also wish to serve teachers, editors, librarians and booksellers. It is not to the credit of England that our editions of the classics are often launched into the world on an apparatus slender for an inquisitive schoolboy. If we are to mend, bibliography must be rescued from the contempt under which it rusts. To see farther than the giants of the past, dwarfs must fain climb upon their shoulders.

I have taken as a basis the Grundriss zu Vorlesungen über die römische Litteraturgeschichte von E. Hübner[3] Berlin Weidmann 1872. Whatever changes seemed expedient I have freely made. Rash and lawless Athetesen, as those of Lehrs in Horace, Ribbeck in Juvenal, I have omitted, holding with Madvig[1] that if the mania for destructive criticism spreads, and is not thrown off as a passing fever, classical studies themselves will be forsaken by reasonable men, desirous of firm and common ground on which to stand and advance. Mr Munro has kindly weeded the titles relating to Lucretius and Catullus. But the chief change consists in very large additions[2]; in the original e.g. the article 'Cicero' occupies less than 5 pages, and the whole book but 119. I have saved room by curtailing titles and by the use of abbreviations; a reference once for all to the guide to the choice of classical books by Joseph Bickersteth Mayor M.A. (London Bell 1874) enables me to pass over many recent English publications.

Some may be surprised to see old editions registered, but I know that scholars of the 16th, 17th and 18th centuries often did more for interpretation than has been done since; the notes amassed in Burman's Petronius or Drakenborch's Livy or Oudendorp's Apuleius are by no means obsolete lumber, but to this day necessary to all serious students of those authors. The catalogues of the libraries formed e.g. by John Mitford, Gottfried Hermann, Otto Jahn, prove that those who are most abreast with the rising tide of knowledge are most fearful of losing the inheritance of the past.

[1] When I met prof. Madvig at the Leyden tercentenary in February 1875, he expressed himself very strongly in this sense; in print also his high authority has always demanded reason and evidence for every change.

[2] Taken in most cases from the authorities named pp. 3—5, but often from actual inspection of the books themselves or from the prefaces of the principal editions and from special bibliographies. To many a friend, often of thirty years' standing or more, I needed no introduction. For bibliography my debt is greatest to Schweiger, Bähr, Teuffel, Engelmann and Lowndes; but for mastery of the subject and condensed power Bernhardy is superior to all his rivals.

In saying this, I may appear to contradict one who has laid classical students under great obligations, by his sympathetic and learned portrait of one of the noblest of the race: but Mr Pattison, I doubt not, laments, as much as I do, the fashionable neglect of 'the living works of dead authors,' though he says[1]: 'Well done, or ill done, or half done, however, Isaac Casaubon's books are now consigned to one common oblivion. They are written in Latin, and scholar's Latin of the renaissance is a peculiar language, accessible to a very circumscribed public. But this is not all. Even for this circumscribed public of scholars Casaubon's books have but a secondary value. Philology is a science, not a fine art; and it is the fate of science that the books, in which it is consigned, are in a constant state of supersession. A work of literature may be surpassed but not superseded. The interpreter of the classics works for his own age only. He is the medium through which we read an ancient book, and the medium must be in the language and mode of our own day. It must possess all the latest improvements. The books of the scholars of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries have therefore for us little more than an historical interest. They will be visited only by those curious enquirers, who may wish to acquaint themselves with the history of learning. The biographical data will be of more interest than the philological matter. Yet as history makes itself from age to age, the oldest names must tend to recede from view. We cannot afford to know all about everybody. How many years will elapse before another reader will go through, as the present writer has done, the bulky folio of Isaac Casaubon's printed epistles[1], or the seven volumes of unprinted answers of his correspondents in the Burney collection?'

For my part I question whether one in ten of those who read the Augustan history, or Suetonius, or Theophrastus, or Strabo, or Athenaeus, feels at liberty to slight Casaubon; and I am sure, that those who know his Persius best, endorse Scaliger's well-known saying. Indeed whoever in any age has traversed the whole compass of ancient learning, must remain a witness to all time.

If Mr Pattison however is speaking not of things as he thinks they should be, but as they are, his statement is borne out by one who, more than any Englishman of our time, knows from bitter experience, παθὼν ἔμαθε, the fickleness[2] of English literary taste:

'In taking leave of this department of his trade, Mr Bohn cannot help lamenting the enormous depreciation

[1] I can answer this challenge at once; years ago, when inquiring into the life of Casaubon's friend Richard Thomson of Clare, I 'went through' and indexed the letters of Casaubon and Scaliger. Probably other living Englishmen have done the same. He would be a bold man e.g. who would undertake to name the printed correspondence of men of letters during the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, which the venerable president of the Chetham society has not digested.

[2] Catalogue of the third and concluding portion of the stock of Mr Henry George Bohn London Sotheby July 1872.

which has taken place of late years in the mercantile value of foreign, and especially classical and philological, literature; books of intrinsic value, which formerly used to sell readily for guineas, and many of them neither superseded nor even displaced by other editions, now sell for shillings, for no other reason that the writer can perceive than that recondite learning in this country is giving way to ephemeral and light reading.'

'The purchasers at the present sale will have the benefit of this state of things.'

This hint may be of service to librarians, to scholars forming their private libraries, to all who wish to do much, at small cost, for the benefit of a college or a poor student. A very large proportion of the Latin classics may now be purchased, in good editions, for the sum of ten pounds. The great lexicons of Stephanus, Gesner, Scheller and Forcellini (this last in the older editions) may be picked up for sums varying from 6*s.* to 20*s.* To the self-taught isolated student this state of the market offers a rare opportunity, and it is certain that, while many who live by teaching the classics, affect to despise them, others are rising, dissenting ministers, national schoolmasters, ladies, men occupied all day in labour or in trade, who covet the learning which the others disdain. I should hail with pleasure the announcement that such a nonconformist divine had received from his congregation a set of quarto variorum editions of the Latin authors; or that such a Manchester[1] merchant had added to Owens college library the folio translations of the classics, or two hundred editions of Horace[1].

[1] Hear the quiet complaint of a German resident (journal of philology VI 27): 'The bulk of this paper was written in Manchester, where there is no large library.' He was compelled to have recourse to the private library of a friend.

I make no apology for inserting the ecclesiastical writers in their places. Bähr, Bernhardy, Teuffel, following the example of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries and the call of Niebuhr, have devoted much attention to the fathers. Hübner says: 'Dass die gesammte christliche römische Litteratur des dritten bis sechsten Jahrhunderts mit aufgenommen werden musste, versteht sich von selbst: wie man die römische Litteratur des dritten bis sechsten Jahrhunderts darstellen könne, ohne Männer wie Tertullian, Prudentius, Hieronymus und Augustinus eingehend zu besprechen, ist mir von jeher nicht deutlich gewesen.' What a harvest philology may reap on the field of the church, we have learnt from Rönsch and Paucker; the historian and antiquary will also find there untold stores of new materials.

I have given lists of the earlier English translations and have specified the editions which contain a complete index. Except in the case of technical authors, I have seldom cited recent translations; for the translator's art for two centuries has sunk amongst us too often to the level of a trade; the Elizabethan translators are mostly models of chaste and manly English. The two series of Latin classics issued by Valpy and Lemaire do indeed contain between them indexes to most of the authors, but as many libraries do not comprise these collections, I have named the indexes of many separate editions besides.

To return to the point from which I started. I regard

[1] The purchase of classical books on a large scale is not quite exploded; twice in my life I have been consulted for the purpose by libraries with which I had no sort of connexion.

him as in no liberal sense a classical scholar, who does not by degrees make himself acquainted with more than the mere titles[1] of all classical authors. It is now easy and cheap to procure, in Teubner's series, the best texts of the entire range of ancient letters; if a man has these on his shelves, and consults e.g. Dio or Suetonius or Pliny or Gellius or Plutarch, as he finds them quoted; if he reads in English translations parts or the whole of works which he lacks time to read in the original; if, on running over a page or two of a lexicon, or of such books as Schwegler's history or Becker's Gallus, he finds that he can estimate the comparative value of the authors cited, knows approximately their dates and the subjects of which they treat, then he has done that which they left undone who forced me to this toil, burdensome alike to me and to the printer.

[1] Some few years ago a Latin poet (I do not mean Plautus) was edited by an Englishman ignorant of his name; yet the nickname has stood for centuries pilloried on the threshold of the commentaries. I have been taken to task in print for preferring new sumpsimus to old mumpsimus, Publilius to Publius Syrus.

Additions are generally marked by square brackets; the article Cicero, having been rewritten throughout, has no such mark. A few books have been twice entered by mistake (Koch 15—6, Werner 132—3, Kellner and Burckhardt 164—5, Dressel 212—3).
